The big point of sale behind the download of movies is convenience. You do not need to enter a car, stay online or spend several days waiting as your DVDs travel back and forth between your home and a shipping center. But choosing a service that does not meet your needs can make the process pale compared to other methods of purchase and rental. The first thing to keep in mind is the platform that the site requires. Most movie sites require Windows XP. Some will also work with Windows Vista or Windows 2000. Only the iTunes Music Store supports Macintosh operating system, and none of the major sites currently supports Linux. Most sites also require Internet Explorer and Windows Media Player. Although you can view most sites in Firefox, the MovieLink site will only work with Internet Explorer with enabled ActiveX control. Amazon Unbox requires Microsoft. Net picture, and Vongo requires a proprietary application. For many users, the next big deal-breaker is the site selection. Download sites get their films from film studios, which own digital rights for movies. A site cannot offer the film without first negotiating an agreement with the studio. Some sites, such as MovieLink, have agreements with many major studios, so they have a wide selection of mainstream movies. Others, such as Guba, have a selection of free films, independent, as well as studio outputs that you can rent for a fee. Vongo is owned by Starz Entertainment, and its selection reflects only what Starz has the right to pass. When you find a site with a selection of movies you like, the next thing to watch is the quality of movies. There are a couple of measures to keep in mind. One is the resolution, which is measured in pixels. The greater the resolution, the better the image quality. For example, movies in the video download store at Wal-Mart have a resolution of 640 x 480 pixels, which is the same as the lowest standard television resolution. Wal-Mart also offers a scaled version for portable media players with a resolution of 320 x 240 pixels. You can also measure bitrate quality, often measured in bits per second (bps). The higher the bitrate, the better the quality -- bitrate DVD is about 5 kg per second (kbps), or 5000 bps. The codec, or program that encodes and decodes digital video, can also significantly affect the quality of the video. However, sites do not always specify which codecs they use. Finally, before buying or renting movies online, you should carefully read the terms of use of the site and familiarize yourself with its DRM. Some sites are relatively flexible. You can play movies on multiple machines, download them to portable media players and also burn them on DVD. Other sites offer much less options -Example, Amazon Unbox received criticism shortly after its launch for the perceived inflictedness of its terms of use. Several sites allow you to make a backup disk that will only be played on the computer Originally used for the file. For sites that use streaming media, you never really own a copy of the movie, just look at it as flows.it you found a site that meets your criteria for platform, selection, quality and terms of use, a few simple questions Can help you make your final choice: how much does the movie cost? Are they almost expensive as DVDs? If so, would you rather find a cheaper alternative or join with high quality DVDs? Do the rental and purchase options match what you are looking for? If the site offers a subscription program, do you have enough movies interested to make it useful? Are the movies compatible with any portable device you want to use to watch them? Several sites guarantee that their files will play on any Microsoft PlaysForsure compatible device, but others have more limited compatibility. Does the site use a file format that you have had good or bad experiences with in the past? Need a download owner manager or player? If so, do you mind downloading and learning how to use them or would you rather use programs you are already familiar with? The player has all the features you want – can you pause, backup and fast forward? To see a comparison of some site offerings, take a look at these articles from TechCrunch and Extremetech.Next, we will take a look at the movie Download the services that are now available. By Liz Jacobs Download MichanoLimit image from Fotolia.com Mozilla Firefox is a web browser similar to Internet Explorer or Google Chrome. The browser is part of the Mozilla application suite. Firefox makes downloading movies easy because once downloaded, a window pops up allowing you to immediately access the download. Downloading a movie in Firefox is very similar to downloading a movie in any other browser. However, the download window is different because Firefox has a unique browser interface. Go to a site like Netflix, Movie Download, #1 Movie Download Online, Joost or Hulu. (See Resources and References). Sign up for the site. Some sites offer a free 30-day trial. Some sites listed are completely free. Select the category “Movies.” Click on the genre of the movie you want to see like Comedy, Drama or Horror. Click on the particular movie you are interested in. Click on “Download.” Some sites, like Hulu, do not include a download button. Their movies are coming back online. To download them, go to a site like Keepvid, Video Downloader or Vidimonkey. Copy the URL of the movie you want to download. Put the URL in the box on Keepvid, the video downloader or Vidmonkey. Click on “Send.” And your movie will start downloading to your computer. Click the file from the download window. Click on “Open.” Your movie will start playing. Radio is making a huge comeback through podcasts. Now you can find podcasts on any And all you have to do is enroll and download. But what should you listen to the movie lovers about their commuter or even at work? These are 10 fantastic podcasts there outside out every kind of movie lover. There’s a podcast for you, whether you like critically acclaimed movies, whether you like movies “so ugly that they are beautiful”, or you like reading uncreated scripts online. Every movie lover should try these ten podcasts at least once. 1. "How was this done? »Source: Earwolf If you love watching terrible movies or just feeling them torn apart by people who love them, then this podcast does for you. The Legaue Paul Sheer and Jason Mantzoukas, and Grace and Frankie's June Diane-Raphael are usually accompanied by a guest to talk about a bad movie and its ridiculous holes in plots, actors, jokes and more. Don't assume this is fed by haters. Many times the hosts actually go out enjoying and recommending the movies they review. At the end of each episode they also have a section called "second opinion" in which they read the reviews of five stars of each film. Of course, sometimes the conductors discover how some of these films are made through interviews to people who have worked on the films themselves. It's really an opening in the eyes of the chaos that can come from the set of a bad movie. 2. «The Blacklist» Source: The WolfPop If you're a fan of reading scripts in particular, then this is for you. This podcast takes scripts that have not yet been made and sits the stars and read a table. Ospite and former development manager, Franklin Leonard loves to define "auricular" episodes and divides every script into four parts. The show changes genres so that one month you could be immersed in a drama, while the next month you could listen to a comedy. Many fans are able to vote which scripts will make the next one. There are also bonus episodes with an interview with the screenwriter. 3. Source: WolfPop Have you ever wondered how it would have been on the set of The Exorcist? Or one of Speed's passengers? Well, this podcast has Matt Gourley interviewed actors who were in classic movies and television scenes telling their stories seeing all magic happen. This is a fun way to get an internal look in the industry from the perspective of extras or support roles. 4. «Maltin On Movies» Source: WolfPop Know Leonard Maltin from his annual film guides that evaluate films so you know what you get before you go to the theatre. Now he has a podcast with Grace and Frankie, Baron Vaughn, to talk about the favorite movies from the film critic and some films you probably saw too much. 5. «You Must Remember This» Source: American Public Media If you love to investigate Hollywood history, then this podcast will make you nerd.
